

Evensong

A wood thrush sang on my forest stage,

Then two—

Then three!

Liquid as quicksilver,

The notes rolled down the valley,

Settled onto the mirror pond surface,

Melding liquid to liquid

Without one ripple.

Dusk closed the curtain so very slowly.