

CONTRIBUTORS

Andrew R. L. Cayton is distinguished professor of history at Miami University in Oxford, Ohio. He has written extensively on the history of Ohio, including Ohio: The History of a People. His most recent book is The Dominion of War: Liberty and Empire in North America, 1500–2000, co-authored by Fred Anderson.

Christopher Clark is professor of North American history at the University of Warwick in the United Kingdom. His book The Roots of Rural Capitalism: Western Massachusetts, 1780–1860 won the Frederick Jackson Turner Award of the Organization of American Historians. Most recently he co-edited Letters from an American Utopia: The Stetson Family and the Northampton Association, 1843–1847.

Ellen Eslinger is professor of history at DePaul University and the author of Citizens of Zion: The Social Origins of Camp Meeting Revivalism and editor of Running Mad for Kentucky: Frontier Travel Accounts.

Patrick Griffin is associate professor of history at Ohio University and the author of The People with No Name: Ireland's Ulster Scots, America's Scots Irish, and the Creation of a British Atlantic World, 1689–1764.

Stuart D. Hobbs is the director of the Ohio State University history department's History in the Heartland, a continuing education program for middle and high school history teachers. His publications include The End of the American Avant Garde.

Tamara Gaskell Miller is the editor of the Pennsylvania Magazine of History and Biography and Pennsylvania Legacies, both published by The Historical Society of Pennsylvania, and a contributor to the edited volume Midwestern Women: Work, Community, and Leadership at the Crossroads.

Donald J. Ratcliffe is Lecturer in American History at the University of Oxford in the United Kingdom. He has also taught at the University of Durham and the Ohio State University. Ratcliffe has written extensively on Ohio political history, most recently in Party Spirit in a Frontier Republic: Democratic Politics in Ohio, 1793–1821 and The Politics of Long Division: The Birth of the Second Party System in Ohio, 1818–1828.

Kenneth H. Wheeler is assistant professor of history at Reinhardt College in Waleska, Georgia, and a contributor to the volume Builders of Ohio.

John Wigger is associate professor of history at the University of Missouri–Columbia. He is the author of Taking Heaven by Storm: Methodism and the Rise of Popular Christianity in America, and co-editor, with Nathan Hatch, of Methodism and the Shaping of American Culture.