

CONTENTS

Acknowledgments ix

PART 1: GUILT AND MEMORY

1. The Vagaries of Collective Symbolic Guilt 3
2. Finding Meaning in Memory: A Methodological Critique of Collective Memory Studies 11

PART 2: HISTORY

3. The Rise and Fall of Metaphor: German Historians and the Uniqueness of the Holocaust 31
4. Between Politics and Memory: The Historians' Debate and West German Historical Culture of the 1980s 54
5. Narrative Invention and Historicization: How Modern Was the Nazi Genocide? 86

PART 3: TELEVISION

6. Entertaining Catastrophe: The Reinvention of the Holocaust in the Television of the Federal Republic of Germany 109
7. Nazis, Viewers, and Statistics: Television History, Television Audience Research, and Collective Memory in West Germany 131
8. The Radicalization of German Memory in the Age of Its Commercial Reproduction: Hitler and the Third Reich in the TV Documentaries of Guido Knopp 154

PART 4: POLITICS

9. High Politics and Communicative Memory: Collective Guilt Management in the Adenauer Era 183
10. The Long Good-bye of the War Generations and the Search for Liberal Politics of Memory: From Adenauer to Schmidt 214
11. Fighting about the Future of the Past: The Difficult Process of Cultural Memory Production in the Kohl Era 248
12. Normalization: The Europeanization of German Political Memory since the 1990s 280

viii CONTENTS

CONCLUSION

Toward a Social Geography of Collective Memory 316

Notes 335

Selected Bibliography 411

Index 429