Daniel R. Magaziner
The Law and the Prophets

“Among the many threads woven together by the Black Consciousness movement, Magaziner convincingly shows the absolute centrality of Christian theology, of the revolutionary ‘Black Christ.’ This is an astonishing book. It is an intellectual history of the first order, and the best treatment so far of the most important anti-Apartheid movement of 1970s South Africa.”—Paul S. Landau, author of Popular Politics in the History of South Africa, 1400 –1948 “Scholars and students of African and South African liberation history, theology, and intellectual history will find The Law and the Prophets provocative and enlightening. The prose is a pleasure to read and the book is skilfully woven together. . . . More importantly, Magaziner challenges us to more seriously consider the implications of Black Consciousness in history.”—South African Historical Journal

Cheikh Anta Babou
Fighting the Greater Jihad

Amadu Bamba and the Founding of the Muridiyya of Senegal, 1853–1913

“In a time when the term jihads has entered our contempo- rary political lexicon in a variety of simplifications, Cheikh Anta Babou provides a deeply researched analysis of the place of the Greater Jihad in the spiritual, intellectual, and political life of a major West African Sufi movement, the Muridyya in Senegal. Babou takes seriously the Murids’ own perspectives on their history and religious practices. He uses Wolof and Arabic sources as well as oral histo- ries rarely used by academic historians and brings these internal sources into a conversation with external archi- val and interpretative sources.”—Richard Roberts, Stanford University 2006 320 pages, illus.

We Are All Zimbabweans Now
A Novel of Postapartheid South Africa
“Too few writers have Kilgore’s wide-angle vision. This promising first book, vividly rooted in his own experience, leaves me eager to read more by him.”—Adam Hochschild, author of King Leopold’s Ghost: A Story of Greed, Terror, and Heroism in Colonial Africa “In We Are All Zimbabweans Now, James Kilgore has given us an intimate view of one man’s journey into Zimbabwe’s often horrific recent past. I’m so pleased the book will now be available to American readers. Not only is the novel an essential contribution to our understanding of what went wrong in Zimbabwe (as well as allowing us to see what went right in the early days), We Are All Zimbabweans Now is wonderfully written, humane, and mysterious from start to finish.”—Peter Orner, author of The Second Coming of Mawala Shikongo

The Uncouling Python
South African Storytellers and Resistance
The Uncouling Python is the first in-depth study of how Africans used oral traditions as a means of survival against European colonialism. They participated in open insurrections and other subversive activities in order to withstand the daily humiliations of colonial rule. Perhaps the most effective and least apparent expression of subversion was through indigenous storytelling and poetic traditions. Scheub has collected the stories and poetry of the Xhosa, Zulu, Swati, and Ndébele peoples to present a fascinating analysis.

Welcome to Our Hillbrow

Introduction by Ghirmay Negash

Welcome to Our Hillbrow is an exhilarating and disturbing ride through the chaotic and hyper-real zone of Hillbrow—microcosm of all that is contradictory, alluring, and painful in the changing South African psyche. Everything is there: the shattered dreams of youth, sexuality and its unpredictable costs, AIDS, xenophobia, suicide, the omnipotent violence that often cuts short the promise of young people, and the Africanaist understanding of the life continuum that does not end with death but flows on into an ancestral realm. Infused with the rhythms of the inner city pulsebeat, this courageous novel is compelling in its honesty and its broad vision, which links Hillbrow, rural Tiragalong and Oxford. It spills out the guts of Hillbrow—living with the same energy and intimate knowledge with which the Drum writers wrote Sophiatown into being.

Sugar Girls & Seamen
A Journey into the World of Dockside Prostitution in South Africa

Sugar Girls & Seamen illuminates the shadowy world of dockside prostitution in South Africa, focusing on the women of Cape Town and Durban who sell their hospitality to foreign sailors. Based on fifteen months of research at the seamen’s nightclubs, plus countless interviews with sugar girls, sailors, club owners, cabbies, bouncers, and barmen, this book provides a comprehensive account of dockside sex work at the southern tip of Africa. Through stories, analysis, and first-hand experiences, it reveals this gritty world in all its raw vitality and fragile humanity, simultaneously racy and light, critical and profound.

Barack Obama and African Diasporas Dialogue and Dissensions

An active blogger on The Zeleza Post, from which these essays are drawn, Paul Tiyambe Zeleza provides a genuinely critical engagement with Africa’s multiple worlds. With a blend of erudition and lively style, Zeleza writes about the role of Africa and Africans in the world and the interaction of the world with Africa. "Exploring the complex cultural and political forces behind the election of Barack Obama, Zeleza provides an exciting springboard to examine the economies of knowledge and the politics of representation in Africa. He is endowed with the gift of tracing Africa and its Diaspora’s various conversations and confrontations across geographies, languages, religions, wars, leisure, poetics, and politics."

Tabitha Kanogo
African Womanhood in Colonial Kenya, 1900–1950

In this compelling history . . . Kanogo uses archival research and oral interviews to explore the debates over clitoridectomy and brideprice; the changing nature of childbirth and motherhood; the impact of mission education; the evolution of women’s legal status; and the struggle for control of African women by African men, European missionaries, and the colonial administration. She argues that while women were restricted in their choices by community, kin, and the wider colonial order, they also demonstrated agency. They took advantage of new openings in the system, running away to mission stations and urban areas. They challenged male elders and so-called customary law through the colonial legal system, and they sought Western education and entrance into new professions. In short, while all Africans suffered constraints and limitations under colonial rule, African women in some instances were able to negotiate beneficial new arrangements. This is an important contribution to Kenyan historiography and women’s studies as a whole. Highly recommended.”—Choice

A History of the Excluded
Making Family a Refuge from State in Twentieth-Century Tanzania

The twentieth-century history of Njombe, the Southern Highlands district of Tanzania, can aptly be summed up as exclusion within incorporation. Njombe was marginalized even as it was incorporated into the colonial economy. Njombe’s people came to see themselves as excluded from agricultural markers, access to medical services, schooling—in short, from all opportunity to escape the impoverishing trap of migrant labor.

Cultivating Success in Uganda

Kigezi Farmers and Colonial Policies

Kigezi, a district in southwestern Uganda, is exceptional in many ways. In contrast to many other parts of the colonial world, this district did not adopt cash crops. Soil conservation practices were successfully adopted, and the region maintained a remarkably developed and individualized land market from the early colonial period. Grace Carswell presents a comprehensive study of livelihoods in Kigezi. Following the lead of groundbreaking studies by Tiffen, Fairhead, and Leach, her case study confirms recent research suggesting that the usual assumptions about population pressure, environment, and long-term land-use change need to be questioned. Her findings are particularly exciting for all those involved in the ongoing key debates in natural resource management, development studies, and environmental history.

War in Northern Uganda, 1985–97

In August 1986, Alice Auma, a young woman in Northern Uganda, proclaiming herself under the orders of a Chrissian spirit named Lakwena, raised an army called Holy Spirit Mobile Forces. With it she waged a war against perceived evil, not only an external enemy, represented by the National Resistance Army of the government, but internal enemies in the form of “impure” soldiers, witches, and sorcerers. She came very close to overthrowing the government and fled to Kenya. This remarkable book concludes with an account of the successor movements into which Alice’s forces fragmented, including the Lord’s Resistance Army, actively involved in the civil wars of the Sudan and Uganda.

The Kingdom of Bunyoro’s story demonstrates convinc-cal ecology of a major African kingdom, Crisis & Decline in Bunyoro addresses state capacity, ideology, and government legitimacy as crucial issues. Shane Doyle focuses on the interplay between levels of environmental activity within a highly stratified society. Political ecology was as much about the differential impact of conflict on society as about the uneven extraction and distribution of resources.

Cold War and Decolonization in Guinea, 1946–1958

“Supported by clear and strong historical evidence, (Eliz-

(Cold War and Decolonization in Africa) is rich with data and empirical examples that illustrate some of the major themes in the history of decolonization, African nationalism, and the rise of one-party states in Africa.”

—International Journal of African Historical Studies

“A compelling narrative of the history of nation building in Guinea. . . . Schmidt deftly portrays the events from an African perspective, using colonial archives, interviews with activists, the era’s popular political songs, and photographs. . . . What simultaneously emerges in this nuanced treatment is a richer understanding of the pragmatic rather than purely visionary leadership of the famous Sékou Touré.”—Choice

“By shifting the focus from elite to grassroot polititics, Schmidt paints a picture of French decolonization in sub-Saharan Africa that is a welcome corrective to those earlier studies that appeared to view decolonization as the outcome of an essentially linear and orderly process, rather than the product of political struggle.”

Kola Is God’s Gift
Agricultural Production, Export Initiatives, and the Kola Industry in Asante and the Gold Coast, c.1820–1950
Kola is a "food-drug," used to induce "flights of fancy," and is incorporated into rites of passage and ceremonies. First recognized in the twelfth century, kola is a legal and popular stimulant among West African Muslims. This study details the legends and lore, social, religious, medicinal, and economic importance of kola nuts, the place of kola in the political economy of Asante and the Gold Coast; and the kola industry in Asante and the Gold Coast gradually transitioned from regions with independent polities to colonial states. Slavery and Reform in West Africa demonstrates the way actors—African and European—interacted in a process that culminated in formal annexation. This innovative study explores how European administrators in West Africa strove to satisfy the abolitionist pressure while placating or duping the slave owners, resulting in an alliance between colonial officials, company agents, and slave owners that undermined slavery reform.

Environmental History in Tanzania’s Usambara Mountains

A CHOICE OUTSTANDING ACADEMIC TITLE

“In this truly groundbreaking study, Conte provides a temporal vision of the area that, in the author’s words, ‘joins natural and human history in a way that illuminates the paradoxes inherent in landscapes.’ He demonstrates that in the precivilian millennia, indigenous agriculturalists and pastoralists adapted to the rich environment, while a brief colonial and immediate postcolonial era ravaged the forest through massive logging operations, resulting in deforestation. This destructive period was followed by the inevitable onset of conservation efforts to preserve what now remains. As Conte wisely observes, the local communities will now have to bear the burden of these latest efforts to affect the environment. This fascinating study deserves the attention of a wide variety of scholars and development experts. Highly recommended.” —Choice

Triumph of the Expert

Agrarian Doctrines of Development and the Legacies of British Colonialism

Triumph of the Expert is a history of British colonial policy and thinking and its contribution to the emergence of rural development and environmental policies in the late colonial and postcolonial period. Joseph Morgan Hodge examines the way that development as a framework of ideas and institutional practices emerged out of the strategic engagement between science and the state at the climax of the British Empire. Hodge looks at the structural constraints, bureaucratic fiascos, and contradictory imperatives that beset and ultimately overwhelmed the late colonial development mission in sub-Saharan Africa, south and southeast Asia, and the Caribbean.

"[The editors] provide a sharp-edged introduction that interrogates concepts of witchcraft and the interdiscipliary perspectives available for its analysis, and brilliant case studies provide the gist." —Choice

Contents: INTRODUCTION  Contestled Domains in the Dialogues of “Witchcraft” by George Clement Bond and Diane M. Ciekawy

Chapters: African Witchcraft: From Ethnography to Critique by Elias Bongmba  •  “Witches” as Superior Intellects: Challenging a Cross-Cultural Superstition by Barry Hallen

• Sorcery: Forces of Life and Death among the Yaka of Zambia by George Clement Bond

• Utsai as Ethical Discourse: A Critique of Power from Mijikenda in Coastal Kenya by Diane M. Ciekawy

• Truth-on-Balance: Knowing the Opaque Other in Twapong: Wisdom Divination by Richard Weirner

• Witchcraft in Modern Africa as Virtualized Boundary Conditions of the Kinship Order by Wim van Binsbergen

• Epistemological and Ideological

This study presents a comprehensive survey and analysis of the literature and debates surrounding African pastoralist societies by a leading anthropologist of African pastoral-

ism. Homewood traces the origins and spread of pastoralism on the African continent and discusses herd biology, pastoralist demography, and the impact of developments and change on pastoralist systems.

Forests of Gold

Essays on the Akan and the Kingdom of Asante

“Wilks is willing to take risks, and even make mistakes, for the sake of opening discussion and expanding knowledge . . . . Forests of Gold is impressive history. One comes away awed at the level of historical reconstruction Wilks has accomplished, demonstrating a level of analysis that has not been achieved regarding almost any other precolonial African state, and which has been achieved here because of Wilks’s forty years of commitment, sensitivity, integrity, and belief in the profession of history and the history of African peoples.” Donna I.E. Maier, International Journal of African Historical Studies

“Wilks’ contribution to our understanding of the history of Asante and that of other Akan-speaking peoples is incalculable. It is evident not only in his own work but in that of the published research of the many talented students he has directed during a long, fruitful career.” —Richard Rathbone, Journal of African History

Negotiating Power and Privilege Career Igbo Women in Contemporary Nigeria
“This is an invaluable contribution to the growing corpus of studies of African women in all their splendid diversities. Critiquing standard theoretical and policy frameworks through which African women have been analyzed and approached, this book offers a refreshing, highly focused, nuanced, insightful, and reflexive portrait of African professional women ignored in much of the literature preoccupied with rural and poor women.” —Paul Tyambe Zeleza

African Apocalypse
The Story of Nontetha Nkwenkwe, A Twentieth-Century South African Prophet
“African Apocalypse . . . offers[s] precious material to investigate more subtly and more creatively some of the most basic challenges to the study of South Africa’s modern history. And it does so with grace and empathy. African Apocalypse is as much a book as it is a gift.” —International Journal of African Historical Studies
“This is a fascinating book, not only for its intriguing heroine and the sequel of the discovery of her grave by the authors and the subsequent re-burial of her remains. . . . The significance of this book is manifold. It is a most useful contribution to South African and Eastern Cape regional history as well as the history of religious movements, gender, and psychiatry in South Africa. The authors foreshadow new territory as well as the history of religious movements, gender, and the sequel of the discovery of her grave by the authors.” —Paul Tyambe Zeleza

David Birmingham
Empire in Africa
Angola and Its Neighbors
“The book is an incisive, engaging piece of scholarship punctuated with impassioned, informed commentary.” —African Studies Review
Birmingham takes the reader through Angola’s troubled past, which included for the first twenty-five years of independence, endemic warfare. He examines the fact that in the absence of a viable neocolonial referee such as Britain or France, the warring parties turned to Cold War superpowers for a supply of guns. For a decade Angola replaced Vietnam as a field in which an international war by proxy was conducted. Empire in Africa explains how this African nation went from colony to independence, how the 1990s Cold War legacy turned to civil war, and how peace finally dawned in 2002.

“All of these essays are written with an overriding preoccupation to communicate and to present complicated stories in a way that the reader can appreciate and assimilate. As glosses on both Angolan history and the Angolan scene over the last thirty years they are little classics, intelligent, witty, informed, and always enlightening.” —Journal of African History

The Struggle for Meaning
Reflections on Philosophy, Culture, and Democracy in Africa
Translated by John Conteh-Morgan
Foreword by K. Anthony Appiah
“A vivid portrayal of the author’s intellectual development, . . . [it] is lucidly written and with great narrative quality. It is thought provoking. A tour de force that pushes the right buttons on issues surrounding the nature of ethnophysics, culture, and the problematic of science research in Africa, it raises the debate on (African) philosophy and its role in aggressively addressing the African condition to new levels. . . . Hountondji is . . . one of the most important figures in both the history and definition of African philosophy.” —International Journal of African Historical Studies
